to Profits - No Jobs

As many an authority has observed, the American people, by and large, are woefully ignorant when it comes to economic matters. Various surveys show that it is especially true of young people, which in itself is an acid commentary on the general level of economic instruction in the schools. The areas of ignorance are wide, extending to the problems of capital investment, the influence of wages on production, prices and competition, to the profits earned by industry, and so on down the line.

For a good many years this country has been riding high so far as incomes and living standards are concerned. There have been setbacks and disappointments. But the gross national product—which is the value of all goods and services we produce—has steadily, and sometimes dramatically, increased. Per capita income, even after adjustment for higher prices and the bite, is at an all-time high—and leads that of any other nation by a wide margin. This is reflected in the output of our factories. More and more goods, and more kinds of goods, flow out of the channels of production, and enter the homes and businesses of consumers.

Yet—and this is a fact that will come as news to a great many people—the profits earned by industry have followed the trend. Instead, they have gone against it.

A publication of the Sun Oil Company tells the basic story. In 15 years, the sales of corporations have more than doubled. But corporate after-tax profits have declined by almost half—from more than nine per cent of the total national income 15 years ago to less than five and one-half per cent last year. And where the corporations earned better than five per cent on sales 15 years ago, the 1961 figure was a bare three per cent. In the publication's words, "No matter how profits are measured, the truth is inescapable that doing business in America has been growing steadily less profitable."

There is probably a more or less general belief that the health or lack of health of the corporate profit situation is of interest only to the owners of the enterprises. In question. If so, this is an economic fallacy of a high and dangerous order. For profits are the prime source of industrial expansion and modernization—and that is a prime national problem today. The world is moving into a new economic era, as the European Common Market, among other forces, abundantly demonstrates. Competition for business has become tougher and tougher—and it is going to be a great tougher still in the future. The Secretary of Labor, to cite just one authority, estimates that as much as $90 billion will be needed to replace our obsolete plants and equipment and make them competitive with facilities abroad—facilities which, in large part, are of postwar origin and are highly advanced.

The Sun Oil Company's magazine also points out that, in addition to our present unemployment roll of about 4.5 million people, 1 million more become job-seekers each year. And it takes an average of $20,000, invested in tools of one kind or another, to create just one job in industry. In some industries the figure is far higher—as, for instance, more than $52,000 in oil.

To quote the magazine again, "Every business needs capital, unless it expects its employees to scratch out the company's products with their bare fingernails." Capital comes from savings. Then, when these savings earn profits, the profits themselves become a source of new capital. And the profitable business attracts savings, in the form of investment in securities. The non-profitable business, on the other hand, cannot generate needed capital within itself—nor can it attract capital from outside.

The solution to the profits problem is not simple. It has many facets, of which one of the most important is the federal tax laws as they apply to depreciation and other matters. But it is clear that the problem is a real one that must be dealt with. The Sun Oil publication sums it up in this phrase: "No profits equals no capital equals no tools equals no jobs."

Interesting Events In Grayling 23 Years Ago

INTERESTING ITEMS OF NEWS GATHERED FROM THE FILES OF THE AVANCEANCE OF 23 YEARS AGO

June 15, 1939

Local Committees in charge of the Boy Scouts of the United States of America, Council Camporee that starts here Friday afternoon and continues to Sunday afternoon are busy putting the finishing touches on the plans. They are hoping the weatherman will ring off on his rain and cold program until this big event is over. Likes about 750 Boy Scouts are praying for the same thing. Grayling's winter sports park will be the scene of activities. Here the tents will be pitched, mess will be served and the program of events will take place. Each troop will provide its own tents, cook and serve their own meals, and will be under the command of its own scoutmaster. It is expected that the tented city will consist of about 300 tents.

With the beginning of another busy summer, we invited your attention to the opening of the C. of C. Tourist Information booth on US-27. It is the desire of the Chamber of Commerce to make this a very useful medium to the benefit of Crawford County and Grayling, and particularly the members of the Grayling Chamber of Commerce, and conduct the booth properly as an information service bureau. Joseph Leinert is to have charge of the Information Booth during the rush period next Saturday and Sunday.

Last Sunday's baseball game with Kalamazoo proved to be a somewhat damp affair, the game being halted in the fourth inning because of rain. Both teams were rather "all wet" and as the league rules call for a half hour wait, they got wetter.

Wood, formerly of Detroit has leased the grocery store in connection with the Douglas Hotel at Lovell, which he and Mrs. Wood will conduct, carrying a line of groceries, cigars, cigarettes, beer and soft drinks, gas, oil, and ice, also a line of fishing equipment. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Martin and son Edward were in Ann Arbor and Lansing the first of the week.

The Tri-County Telephone Co. has broken ground for the construction of a new telephone office. This is located on US-27 next to the Hartley Cash and Carry Store. While this is going on, survey crews are busy laying out lines for a new distribution system. When completed Grayling will have the most modern dial telephone system in Michigan.

We have a brand-new green roof and a fresh coat of snow-white paint with green trim. Danebod Hall stands out like a new building on Michigan Avenue. On the inside, the basement has been covered with a new wood board. It certainly is a nice improvement and presents a very pleasing appearance. To Mrs. Rasmus Hanson goes the credit for the repairs as they were financed through her kind generosity.

We still think Spike slipped by letting the King and Queen get out of the country without a canoe trip down the AuSable.
